BIOGRAPHY

PRINCESS PHOENIX is Brighton-based alt Indie Pop act Daisy Freeman and Tom Callaghan.

From Daisy's childhood obsession with Smash Hits/TOTP/everything 1980s, to later while at drama school, answering a newspaper ad for "Singing lessons with producer who has worked with Chart acts". Princess Phoenix was born!

Influences: including Blondie, Transvision Vamp, The Pretenders, Stevie Nicks, Belinda Carlisle, X-Ray Spex, The Distillers, Duran Duran, Courtney Love and Beastie Boys have spawned grunge-punk attitude melded with pop hooks.

Prolific Song writing: With two albums (Maiden's Masquerade and Neon Lights, City Streets) under her belt with producer/co-writer Tony Duke, Daisy Freeman has now recruited guitarist/songwriter/fellow music obsessive Tom Callaghan and is busy working on an exciting, eclectic new album with Stereolab synth wiz and engineer Joe Watson. Watch this space!

Live: Playing the Brighton pub scene has garnered great feedback for the band including the memorable drunken cry: "you've got a lotta bottle, and that's what it's all about!"

Airplay: Princess Phoenix song "Two of a Kind" was recently BBC Unsigned "Track of the Day" on BBC Radio Sussex and Surrey's Drive time show and then played again with a live interview on the Breakfast show as part of BBC Music Day.
